Three works by Milwaukee artist Keith Nelson are on view in the Haggerty Museum exhibition Current Tendencies IV: Topography Transformed. Nelson makes object-based collages using found materials like scrap metal, old plywood, recycled office furniture, and reclaimed plastic. To transform these common materials into a greater whole, Nelson employs a sculptural process informed by the language of painting: he considers relationships of color, texture, and surface to build up layered, multidimensional works of art.

July 16, 2015 - GROW with Marquette gallery talk with Keith Nelson.
