The Marquette University Doodle Competition is Up and Running!

Marquette students, faculty, and staff now have the opportunity to showcase their creative abilities by submitting hand-drawn doodles to a university-wide competition. Based on a theme chosen by the Haggerty Museum of Art staff, the competition will take place twice each year, culminating at the end of the fall and spring semesters with an awards ceremony. The competition is the brainchild of Marquette senior Ben Hofman, who began doodling last year while recovering from a stroke. According to Ben, “Through doodling, my brain was figuring out new ways to fix itself. I not only found my passion, I found my secret weapon.”
